SCHOOL REPORT.

In conformity with the laws of the State, the School Committee of Richmond respectfully present the following report :

Whole amount appropriated for the common schools of the town, $884.54 including the literary fund of $52.54. There was also a special tax in Dist. No. 2 of $15.00, making in all $899.54. Whole amount expended for the same, $832.18 including $32.33 paid to Dist. No. 10. The amount each district received and the unexpended balance, in the treasury of the town may be seen in the tabular statement.

The aggregate number of weeks of school, 174.8 ; whole number of scholars, 149 ; cost per scholar, $5.37 ; average daily attendance, 120.6 ; cost per scholar based upon the average attendance, $6.63 ; total number of days' absence, 518 ; tardies, 155 ; dismissals, 41 ; number of visits by Superintending Committee, 39 ; number of visits by citizens and others, 296.

As we draw near the close of another school year, we are sorry to find by reviewing and comparing the record of the previous one with this, that there has been a considerable decrease in the average attendance, as well as in the number of visits by parents and citizens. There is nothing that tends more to lessen the interest of pupils in their studies, and hinder their progress, than irregular attendance. It is a duty which rests upon parents and guardians, to correct this serious fault. The ruinous habit existing, of keeping children from school, implies a lack of appreciation of school privileges, or a disregard for their welfare. We find much difference in districts in regard to this, the school registers showing it in a marked degree.

The record of attendance and number of visits by parents, taken together, generally form a safe criterion by which to judge of the interest and co-operation existing in a district.

For if parents are interested enough to see that their children are punctual, they will almost invariably be prompted to visit the school, and by their aid and encouragement, lighten the labors of the teacher and prepare the way for the pupils to secure the greatest possible benefit from each term. Nos. 1, 2, and 9, afford examples worthy of imitation.

Availing ourselves of the privilege which the law prescribes, we have the past year introduced Harpers' Geographies into the schools, to continue in use as the legal text-book on that subject for three years, dating from April 1st, 1881, and as much longer as is deemed expedient; as we consider it far superior to the old ones and, consequently, better suited to the need of the schools. The introduction has thus far been gradual, but that method has resulted in making too many classes, and it would be best, both for pupils and teachers, that it should be fully completed at the commencement of the summer terms.

We have also introduced by recommendation, Swinton's Language Lessons, a text-book on grammar which promises to supply a need long felt by being well adapted to the understanding of beginners. After that has been mastered the pupil is well prepared to commence Swinton's English Grammar. We are sorry to find so small a proportion of boys in this study.

There has long been a disposition in our schools to regard the Spelling Book and Grammar as being of minor importance, which is a very mistaken idea, for no one can write and speak the English language correctly without a good knowledge of both, which is the foundation of a good education. And by what surer means is one's illiteracy made manifest than by a violation of the rules of either. With the exception of the above named, the text-books remain the same as heretofore.

Although the schools of the past year, have, with the exception of two or three, been successfully taught, yet the greatest amount of good which might have been derived from the money expended, has not been attained, deducible from the fact that there has been no improvement, as yet, in the school system, which, for a number of years, has been growing less adequate to meet the demands of the case. No system can be called good which fails to provide for the best interest of the majority subject to its control. While district No. 6 school contains about one third of the whole number of pupils in town, making it impossible for the best of teachers to do justice to it as an ungraded one, most of the eleven remaining ones are disproportionately small, the number of pupils in the smallest school being four.

Let us not wait till the decrease in the number of scholars compels the abandonment of school organizations in all the smaller districts before we see our duty as parents and citizens clearly, but decide sooner, to act in a manner more compatible with justice and right, as well as the best good of the town as a whole, by rearranging and reducing the number of districts sufficiently to provide the way for a more judicious expenditure of the school money.

Could this important achievement be effected, and accompanied by the necessary auxiliaries, a wide-awake interest and zeal in the cause of education, we might reasonably expect to see a revolution in school affairs which would be highly creditable to us as a community as well as a means of lasting benefit to our children.

SPECIAL REPORTS.

DISTRICT No. 1—Summer term. Length of school, 7 weeks. Whole number of pupils, 5. Teacher, Miss Addie E. Healy of Winchester, N. H.

We visited the school the first part of the term and were glad to find the same teacher in the school room again, and the school in the usual prosperous condition, with every indication that this term would be fully as creditable to all concerned, as former ones under her charge have been; and although an examination was prevented by sickness of the pupils, yet with so interested and ambitious a school and so able a teacher, we feel confident that they accomplished all that was expected of them.

Fall term. Length of school, 12 weeks. Whole number of pupils, 4. Teacher, the one of last term

For four consecutive years Miss Healy has retained her position as teacher in this school, than which, no better evidence could be given that her labors have been highly creditable to herself and satisfactory to the district. Though the school was small, still, by her energy and untiring devotion, she made it very interesting and profitable; and by her kindness and genial ways won the lasting love and respect of her pupils.

The closing exercises displayed, as heretofore, promptness and great thoroughness, which is one of the most important points in a good examination. A prize was offered to the one who should make the most improvement in writing during the term, and Edgar G. Conway was the recipient. Still, excellent improvement in that branch was made by all. There was not a tardy mark during the year, and no absent marks by those belonging in the district except in one case, which was caused by sickness. This speaks well for the parents who take a lively interest in their school.

DIST. No. 2—Summer term. Length of school, 7 weeks. Whole number of pupils, 11. Teacher, Miss Mary G. Healy of Winchester, N. H.

With the same teacher whose services were so well appreciated last year, and whose experience and ability were sufficient guarantee for success, it is hardly necessary to say that the result of her work this term, proved to be highly satisfactory to all. There was neither a tardy nor absent mark during the whole time, which is a record to be proud of, and which also shows that there was no diminution of interest on the part of the parents.

Fall term. Length of school, 7 weeks. Whole number of pupils, 16.

It was greatly to the advantage of all concerned that they were able to retain Miss Healy as teacher for this, the fourth term. As heretofore the merits of the school were of a high order. There was thorough, telling instruction, and excellent deportment. Two new branches of study were introduced, Algebra and Physiology. It would be to their profit if more of the schools would adopt the latter study, as it is a very interesting and useful one; for how can we obey the laws of health without a knowledge of them?

The examination was extremely interesting, and gave abundant evidence that it was the result of much pains and hard labor, by both teacher and pupils.

The usual exercises were interspersed with singing and declamations, which were deserving of special commendation.

There were no tardy marks this term, but a few absent marks occasioned by sickness, which do not detract from credit of the school for punctuality, as they were unavoidable. Where there is as much interest and co-operation, as is manifested there, we may be sure there will be no unnecessary marks against the name of any.

We noticed that the grounds around the school house had been much improved the past season. Would that the spirit, which animates this district, might be infused into each one in town, that they might be prompted to do likewise.

DIST. No. 3.—Summer term. Length of school, 6 weeks. Whole number of pupils, 6. Teacher, Miss Abbie T. Taft of Keene, N. H.

This was her first experience in the capacity of a teacher. We visited the school the first part of the term, which presented a favorable appearance. The scholars were orderly and well disposed. Not being present at the examination we were unable to judge of the progress made.

Fall term. Length of school, eleven weeks. Whole number of pupils, five. Teacher, Miss Alice E. Taylor of this town.

Although this was her first term, she displayed much ability, and seemed zealous in the discharge of her duty, and endeavored to instill into the minds of her pupils the importance of learning. Order and improvement was her motto, thus her labors were crowned with success.

DIST. No. 4.—Summer term. Length of school, eight weeks. Whole number of pupils, fifteen. Teacher, Miss Fanny E. Holbrook of Swanzey, N. H.

This was her third term in this town, and second in the district. At our first visit we were not so favorably impressed as heretofore. Much vigilance and care were necessary in the management of this school, and had there been a more rigid discipline, a more satisfactory result would have been attained; yet a fair degree of progress was made.

Fall term. Length of school, seven weeks. Whole number of pupils, fourteen. Teacher, Miss Mary G. Healy of Winchester, N. H.

This district was fortunate in securing the services of so able an instructor. We were well pleased with the appearance of the school. There seemed to be a united interest in both teacher and scholars. At the examination we were well satisfied with what had been done. Order reigned in the school room. But one instance of tardiness was found on the register, which shows an improvement over the last term.

DIST. NO. 5.—Summer term. Length of school, three weeks. Whole number of pupils, eighteen. Teacher, Miss Lilla F. Read of Swanzey, N. H.

This was Miss Read's first experience in teaching. She did not seem to realize the importance of her position, being somewhat negligent in the discharge of her duties. The district feeling that it would be for the best interest of all concerned, the school was brought to a close after keeping three weeks.

Fall term. Length of school, fourteen weeks. Whole number of pupils, twenty-three. Teacher, Miss L. Belle Marshall of Northampton, Mass.

Miss Marshall was endowed with many of the qualifications required of one in her situation. At our visit at the first part of the term, there seemed to be an awakening interest in the school, giving us the impression that a good work would be accomplished. At the examination we were sadly disappointed. There was a lack of interest, promptness and decision in the recitations, showing that little improvement had been made.

DIST. NO. 6.—Summer term. Length of school, 9 weeks. Whole number of pupils, 28. Teacher, Miss Minnie L. Bent of Cavendish, Vt.

This was the fourth term in succession which has been taught by the same teacher, and she sustained well the reputation she earned from the first. It is rarely the case, that so many of the essential qualities of a good teacher are found combined as are possessed by her. What we have said in regard to previous terms under her charge will apply well to this.

We think she discharged the duties incumbent on her as teacher faithfully, and during each term the pupils progressed steadily. Yet we think her work might have been made much pleasanter, had all concerned done their part as well.

It is an undoubted fact in the minds of all who have given the matter any thought, that there is a home training in all districts which materially adds to, or lightens the labors of a teacher. It is deeply to be regretted that so few in this district realize the fact that it is for their own and their children's best interest to pursue a course which is calculated to insure the latter effect.

Fall term. Length of school, 10 weeks. Whole number of pupils, 35. Teacher, Miss Lydia Swan of Winchester, N. H.

In making our report of this term, duty compels us to say that it did not prove to be as satisfactory as was desirable, a result which was partly due to the usual delinquency of the district, and partly attributable to causes for which the teacher was somewhat responsible. It requires a good degree of discretion and judgment in a teacher, to enable her to preserve her dignity, and maintain the authority due to her position.

At our visit the first week, the school appeared tolerably well. At our second visit, some weeks later, we were not so favorably impressed. Some of the scholars seemed to have drifted somewhat from the teacher's control.

The interest during the last few weeks was doubtless considerably diminished by evening gatherings at the school house and elsewhere, and also by the influence of two or three of the larger boys, who should have set an example of orderly and gentlemanly deportment, but, instead, led the way in various improprieties of conduct. We do not include all, for there were some to whom these remarks do not apply. When boys so far forget themselves, and what they go to school for, as to demolish the seats and desks and otherwise damage the house, the improprieties assume a sufficiently glaring nature to merit the attention of the tax-payers of the district, even if they send no scholars, and cause them to seek some remedy.

We think there should be a limit to a teacher's forbearance, and when that limit has been passed, justice to herself and to the school demands that she should request the offending one to remain at home, or call on the committee to expel him, and we think had the most troublesome one in this case been so dealt with, it would have had a beneficial effect on others and made the school more profitable.

We presume some progress was made, but how much we are unable to say, as no examination was had on account of the downfall of the stove pipe, either accidental or otherwise, which occurred at the noon intermission of the last day. We may be mistaken in our view of the case, yet the previous condition of things would seem to warrant the belief that an examination was not desirable, and that the stove pipe had been poised, with a view to avoid it. Be that as it may, there appeared to be little sorrow manifested for the event.

It becomes us as a district, and especially as parents, to give ourselves a personal and critical examination, and see how far we are concerned in the welfare and reputation of our school, and how far we are using our influence to promote that end.

We have the largest school in town and also the largest appropriation of money for the support of the same; and why can it not rank among the best in point of excellence? Let not our apathy in the matter become so chronic as to require the razing of the school-house, to rouse us to a sense of our duty to ourselves and to our children, but bestir ourselves and make a new departure in the management of school affairs.

DIST. No. 7.—Winter term. Length of school, ten weeks. Whole number of pupils, nine. Teacher, Miss Mauquette E. Sprague of this town.

At the commencement we found the school in good working order, with indications that the pupils intended to make good use of their time, and that the teacher was doing her best to assist them, and so far as we know the term was a satisfactory one. Very good progress was made in most of the branches pursued. We were particularly pleased with the class in written arithmetic, who showed themselves thoroughly posted in the principles gone over, and well prepared to make a practical application of the rules they had learned, which is in general too rarely the case, teachers and pupils being inclined to confine themselves too closely to their text-books. This class has sustained the same reputation for several years past.

DIST. No. 8.—Fall term. Length of school, nine weeks. Whole number of pupils, seven. Teacher, Miss Belle C. French of this town.

We are pleased to report that this school made a very commendable degree of improvement. The system of instruction was good, and the teacher worked faithfully for the advancement of her pupils. The promptness with which the answers were given at the examination, and the knowledge shown of the subjects gone over, gave conclusive evidence that efficient work had been done. The progress of the Primer class was worthy of special mention; and we were glad to learn that the Spelling Book had its share of attention. A recitation in Algebra and Physical Geography added to the interest of the exercises at the examination.

Considerable attention was given to drawing, and some praiseworthy specimens were shown. This is a branch which might be profitably adopted by all the schools, as it is one which trains the eye and hand, so that one may become a skillful worker in the industries of life.

DIST. No. 9.—Summer term. Length of school, seven and eight-tenths weeks. Whole number of pupils, eleven. Teacher, Mrs. Mary E. Barden of this town.

We were glad that Mrs. Barden's services were again secured for this school, as she has proved herself to be an excellent instructor. She performed her duties faithfully and impartially, thus gaining the love and confidence of her pupils. At the examination we found the school had prospered under her direction. The scholars were prompt in their recitations and accurate in their answers.

Fall term. Length of school, twelve and four-tenths weeks. Whole number of pupils, thirteen.

This term was conducted by the same teacher with marked results. She spared no pains in her labors, but strove to enlighten the minds of her pupils, and secure to them a lasting benefit.

At the examination we felt satisfied that all had done their part. We were well pleased with the promptness of the small scholars, showing that they had complied with the teacher's requirements, thus gaining credit therefrom. Considerable attention was given to map drawing, a subject which should claim more attention in all the schools. The teacher remarks, it is worth of mention that not an instance of absence occurred during the year of any pupil belonging to the district, and but for a mistake on the part of the children, there would have been none of tardiness. The parents have made an effort, as far as it was in their power, to make our school a model one in this respect.

DIST. No. 13.—Summer term. Length of school, eight weeks. Whole number of pupils, nine. Teacher, Miss Nellie S. B. Lunt of Lexington, Mass.

Miss Lunt made her first attempt in teaching here, and we are sorry to say that the school did not quite come up to our expectation in several respects, partly because of some lack of adaptability on her part, to the work, and partly from lack of help from the parents. Had she been placed under more favorable circumstances she might have accomplished more. Nothing will prove more ruinous to the welfare of a school than for parents to sympathize with their children in their complaints against the teacher, which is often thoughtlessly done. Instead, there should be a thorough investigation in the case, and if the teacher is really in the wrong, a consultation with her, with a view to right it.

The interest of the pupils in their studies was doubtless considerably lessened, and their progress hindered by the great irregularity of attendance. This school, according to the number of pupils, is not equaled in the number of absent and tardy marks by any except No. 6.

We are unable to say just how much was accomplished during the term as there were only four or five pupils present at the close.

Fall term. Length of school, eleven weeks. Whole number of pupils, seventeen. Teacher, Miss Louise K. Beard of Reading, Mass.

The result of the term was very satisfactory, being in charge of a teacher, who, having had the advantage of a Normal school training, together with much natural ability, was prepared to do thorough and efficient work, and we believe she discharged her duty faithfully. We were especially pleased with the excellent order that prevailed; and by her dignified and lady-like bearing she exerted a refining influence upon her pupils, and won their respect and esteem.

The progress was all that could be expected, considering the great disadvantage which was labored under in consequence of the irregular attendance, a fault for which the teacher was not responsible. We believe it would be for the interest of the school to secure, if possible, the services of Miss Beard again.

DIST. No. 14.—Summer term. Length of school, eight weeks. Whole number of pupils, six. Teacher, Miss Maurette E. Sprague.

Although the school was small and most of the pupils young, yet they appeared very creditably at both our visits. We think both teacher and pupils tried to make good use of their time during the term, and very good progress was made in most of the studies pursued. We noticed especially the improvement in the reading and spelling classes. Four names out of the six appeared on the Roll of Honor, and not one tardy mark against the name of any, which speaks well for the record of attendance.

Fall term. Length of school, eight weeks. Whole number of pupils, eight.

The same teacher was again employed for this term. The pupils were praiseworthy in diligence and good deportment, and the teacher seemed to be interested and anxious for the improvement of those under her charge. Some of the pupils in Mental Arithmetic were not quite as prompt as was desirable, yet as a whole the examination proved to be satisfactory.

But in regard to the school-house, we were unable to see any improvement whatever. It is utterly destitute of all means of comfort or convenience, with not even a tolerable blackboard for use, and wholly unfit for the purpose for which it is used. In summing up the yearly valuation of school property in town, for the Statistical Report, it has for some time been rated the lowest of any in town, except that of No. 8. The pupils are certainly worthy of a better school room. And were the demands of justice and duty complied with, they would have it.
